Roots & Wings

Saratoga Community Garden 1972–1987

The Saratoga Community Garden flourished as an educational demonstration garden for children and the community, providing an opportunity for all to connect with the ways of the garden and sustainable farming, and to glean insights from nature. The 10-acre living classroom—with nature as instructor—inspired thousands of children and adults over its fifteen-year life.

Our exhibit features an oral history interview of Betty Peck and Jackie Welch and many photos of the garden. Please come to see the exhibit, enjoy refreshments and hear about the efforts currently underway to establish a new teaching garden in Saratoga by Betty Peck and other members of the community.
