What is an “Environmental Leader”?

“Caring about future generations enough not to degrade Earth’s life-support systems is important because it gives future generations options for dealing with the problems they will face. If our ancestors had left us the ecological devastation we are leaving our descendants, our options for enjoyment, perhaps even our survival, would be quite limited.”

Future generations give us a reason for treating our ecological home respectfully, so that our lives as well as theirs will be enriched.”

Biologist David Ehrenfeld
