Goal is to announcemen clarify the expectations of outcome statements. ts Lead Before the eLumen and Pandemic 'break' the College had agreed to start each and every outcome statement Mary with a Bloom's Taxonomy word. Thus, I consider that as my responsibility to flag. Beginning this Fall Mary became a member of ASCCC Accreditation Committee. In addition to other best practices, the language of the outcome statement is being emphasized as part of making the statement socially just. Since the current accreditation cycle is here and the next will be here before you all will know it, I am infusing my work in reviewing CSLOs on curriculum workflows with this point of "language is important". In addition here are best practices that we have been adhering to:

	<ul> <li>Does the outcome support the program goals?</li> <li>Does the outcome describe what the program intends for students to know (cognitive), think (affective, attitudinal), or do (behavioral,</li> </ul>
	<ul> <li>performance)?</li> <li>Is the outcome: <ul> <li>Measurable/identifiable?</li> <li>A result of learning?</li> </ul> </li> <li>Can the results from assessing this outcome be used <ul> <li>to make decisions on how to improve the program?</li> </ul> </li> </ul>
