Film Journal, "V for Vendetta"

1) Throughout the film V is described as a 'terrorist'. In your view, is this accurate? What is terrorism, and how does it differ from other forms of rebellion?

2) In his first television broadcast, V states that "there are problems with this country", but never specifies what they are. In your view, what are the specific problems with life under the Norsefire government?

3) V employs several violent methods in his attempt to undermine the Norsefire government. In a conversation with Evie, he asserts that "violence can be used for good." In your view, s violence ever a legitimate means of political resistance? If so, when? If not, why not? 4) Inspector Finch asks whether we would really want to know if our government were responsible for moral atrocities. Why might a person answer "yes"? Why might they answer "no"?

5) Why, in your view, does V imprison Evie?
